

Visitor in the Staff Site

One of our very own ASPL's was greeted last night by a burrowing furry critter. Joe Bosler was rudely awakened by a freak of nature. It crawled beneath his tent, forcing him to stand upon his cooler for two hours and stab holes in the bottom of his tent. Though the critter remains at-large, Joe's tent is now officially dead

Thought For the Day

Notice how women who say all men are alike very seldom have trouble telling the difference between you and George Clooney?

Weather Report

More rain is expected this week with brief periods of dryness in between. Remember, Murphy's law has assured us that if you are not carrying your poncho it will rain on you. Heavenly bodies are expected to rise in the east and set in the west until further notice.

Profiles in Courage

One of our very own White Stag Staff members has been reported to be the son of an Ostrich farmer and a Foot-Fungus Doctor. His hobbies include riding ostriches and watching his mother examine lower limbs. If you see this staff member from 982, Bret, also ask him about his ostrich feather sleepingbag. Maybe, if your nice to him, he'll give you an ostrich burger.

White Stag Tailoring

Our own Nick Peters (head equipment quartermaster) is also an accomplished seamstress. If anyone is in need of some sewing, please see Nick in the EQM tent.

Lost Items

Are you missing something? Your neckerchief slide, your name tag, some Silverware? I may have them. If you can find Me and tell me exactly what you are missing, I may let You off easy. However, all non-claimed items will come back to haunt you.

Crash

Some persons, whom I will not mention (K. Hall and J. Cress), were found driving recklessly on the camp's main roadway (Route 66). Punitive measures are in the process of being enforced. Information coming from any and all witnesses will be welcome and greeted with cash rewards. these two criminals may have enlisted the help of some participants in removing the evidence of the crash. If you confess your actions, you may make it easier on Yourselfes.

P.S.-The 1998 White Stag Staff would like to thank everyone for helping us fix our gapping problem.
