
Stag Daily

Volume 4 Issue 2

June 11 1996

Weather report do not see above

Mr. Mangold finds new love with Butch

Mr. Mangold got a surprise last night in BP Hall when Travis's new wife Butch comforted him on his anniversary. Since Mr. Mangold's wife couldn't be there, Travis decided to be nice and share.

For those of you kiddies who were wondering why there was no Troop 954 last year, our ace reporters will bring you this tale of terror. After being warned by the food quartermasters numerous times not to step on the concrete outside the food pickup area, a young scout who we'll refer to as Joe, decided that he would do it just to spite them. Well, little did he know the concrete was actually rubidium, a radioactive element that is very hazardous. As soon as young Joe touched the concrete he was hit by radiation and turned into a mushy pile of goo. And this is the story of Sloppy Joe.

The 1996 White Stag Staff patrol was devastated yesterday morning when their hard worked on flag was shot down by the deceitful scoutmasters and participants. However, their pride was restored when they presented their best flag yet before supper. The staff claims their flag will be the best ever. Our reporters agree.

The answer to yesterdays duck quiz is "a woodduck". Today's question is: What duck has white greater Mark, Instructor from Troop 961, plays spectacular Taps concert at flag lowering and boosts morale.

(cont from colum1)coverts, purple-blue speculum, tips of secondary flights white?
Hint: it flies and has webbed feet.

Comics: Gee I didn't know it fit.
(too bad you guys can't see the picture huh?)

SPL Pat Day spotted mice yesterday rummaging around. The biggest question we were puzzling is whether the mice were checking on the participants or looking for food.

Due to Nick Snider's generous nature, he felt the mosquitos weren't receiving enough blood, so he decided to give his blood to mosquito charity.

The sand shark was spotted moving yesterday around the staff flag, we warn all participants to please stay out of the deep end of the pool.

Real News:

There have been reports that we as a newspaper staff are not being serious enough, and putting enough real news in the paper, so we have decided to share some with you. Enjoy.

We have discovered that there is zero percent cholesterol in a box of Marsh Cornflakes.

Official SPL time is 23:48.16