Funeral Announcements

Wile E. Coyote has unfortunately plunged to his death this morning at the White Stag Conference Assembly. It was evidently a suicidal attempt, for Steve Ostendorf truly loved him. He crushed Steve by jumping right in front of Steve to his death while Steve tried to fix his phone.

The funeral service will be held tomorrow at 8:30 am. All who knew him are welcome.

A reminder to all scouts...

Please put all cleaning materials (soap, scrubbing pad, sanitizer, ect...) in a plastic bag and keep them in your patrol box. Also be sure to close all containers, especially jars, in your food boxes.

New Math Program Offered at White Stag

There is a new math program offered at White Stag this year. It is Math Made Easy by Mr. Dawson. It will help you learn the best math skills you will need to survive in the real world. Here are a few examples:

-If there are 95 participants and 47 staff (142 in all) that you want to feed, then how many pieces of bread will you need to serve sandwiches. Hint: two pieces of bread per person, no extras.

Participant News Update:

-Contest Update...The patrol name of the week is in a close running between "Big Blue Barrels that Mosquitos Can't Have Babies in" and "The White Stag Staff".

-If you are looking for the history of name tags, the man to see is Joe Day of troop 951.

Moles are invading Camp Redwing

Moles are invading our camp. The first sighting was this morning after breakfast. He ransacked a staff member's tent not from inside, but underneath. It seems that the mole was trying to burrow to the surface and get out into the open. The only problem was he ran into a tent. He tried to get out, but ended up only making a mess of the member's tent. He then burrowed off to some other area. If this dag'gun mole is found, or any of his buddies, please report them dead or alive to the camp staff.

Thanks, The Management
